Remedies are Needed

Were we perfect, which we are not, medicines would not often be needed. But since our systems have become weakened, impaired and broken down through indiscretions which have gone on from the early ages, through countless generations, remedies are needed to aid Nature in correcting our inherited and otherwise acquired weaknesses. To reach the seat of stomach weakness and consequent digestive troubles, there is nothing so good as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a glycerie compound, extracted from native medicinal roots-sold for over forty years with great satisfaction to all users. For Weak Stomach, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Pain in the Stomach after eating, Heartburn, Bad Breath, Belching of food, Chronic Diarrhea and other Intestinal Derangements, the "Discovery" is a time-proven and most efficient remedy.

The genuine has on its outside wrapper the Signature

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic, medicine of known composition, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit.

••••••••• Bald-Headed Musicians. The important observation has been made that the blowers of wind instruments are invariably bald or baldescent, while the sawyers of strings are adorned with locks to make a Delilah's fingers itch, writes Robert M. Gay in the Atlantic. Clarinet, oboe, horn, trombone, tuba, and bassoon have blown each other's heads as bare as strocco and simoon the plains of Africa. But of all baid heads, Tympano's is the baldest. His radiant scone beams out in the musical storm like the moon amid broken clouds, and, I have no doubt, gives us much confidence to the navigators of the musical sea. He is never at a loss. He glares at the score. His uncompromising attitude shows you that he, at any rate, knows what it is all about. How admirable in his selfpossession as he screws up his diaphragms, taps them gently, carressingly, with critical ear inclined, and allays their throbbings with unfevered palm. (And all this amid an avalanche of sound, like a man artistically tying his necktie while sliding down the Jungfrau.)

MISPLACED ACT OF KINDNESS

Aotherly Woman Meant Well, but Sequel Made Her Look Like a Kidnaper.

Paul's mamma at times fairly exudes maternity. Her heart goes out ings visibly in check. Now if you will be prosecuted. questioned her in that respect she would admit sadly that kindness to strange children does not always pay. The change of heart arrived because of an incident on a certain day when, ferociously riding her hobby of motherly kindness to all childbood, she made a hurried dart across Broadway to board a certain car.

As she reached the step, breathless but safe, the vision before her was that of a large, comely, well-dressed woman comfortably climbing to the platform and into the car, utterly unmindful of the small, overdressed child in her wake, endeavoring to emulate her every action.

ness in her grasp Paul's mamma lift- 1-1-11 ed the child in her arms, and so entered the car, setting the small girl in the aisle as she took her seat. As she did so the child for the first time turned, and, looking her full in the face broke out into a loud wail, which attracted attention.

The large, comely woman was comfortably seated at the far end as Paul's mother, putting her arms protectingly about the bawler, pointed her out to the weeping youngster.

"There she is, dear. There's mother. Run along to mother."

"I'm not her mother." was the startling rejoinder. "I never saw the child before. When she ran across the street in front of you I took it for granted she was yours. She certainly isn't my child."-New York Times.

Whim of a Property Owner.

A. J. Singelyn of the Burns hotel says somebody played a mean trick on one of his German customers recently. "The German had one of those oldfashioned fly traps in his place," said Mr. Singelyn, "It is about a foot high and half the diameter at the bottom. The flies get in somehow and then they can't find their way out. A fellow went into the saloon on one of the hot days and the fly trap was full. 'I'll give you half a dollar for them flies,' said he, and the German's face lit up as he accepted it and shoved over the trap. The man looked at it

"What's the matter, old man?" asked the earl of Arundel, as he approached Sir Francis, who seemed to be in a blue funk.

"Confound it," replied Bacon, "I had all prepapartions made to write Shakespeare's plays, and now I hear the dog gone faker has gone and written them himself. It's my opinion that he's handed the world a gold brick."

Herewith the incident was considered opened.

Thanksgiving.

Not for what men esteem as wealth, Nor yet the blessed boon of health: Not e'en for friends, though friends are dear, And not the least of blessings here, Father, do I thank Thee.

Not for those things that man would please And might pamper his sordid ease: But for the toiling of the chase And the swift running of the race. Father, do I thank Thee

For the strength that knows no failing, For courage that knows no quailing In the face of opposing might, But holds always to what is right, Father, do I thank Thee!

Not e'en for tasks already done. Not for the vict'ry already won; But for the cause that's just and right And for the pleasure of the fight, Father, do I thank Thee!

-FLETCHER DAVIS. By the time this issue reaches its readers Hondo's initial Trades Day will be on. Of course, we can not say what success it will be. But be that what it may, a step has been taken in the right direction. Let's not go backward. Profiting by whatever mistakes may have been made in this initial step, let's make a success of the last Saturday in December the date of the next Trades Day. In this connection, it would be well to remember that often nothing is done by attempting too much. Let's attempt only that King. which can be done. WITH CUPID AT THE BAT

CATHERINE M. PATTERSON

Ton Cupid, once upon time, in erch of tdle pleasure, sent pretty Mayllis awandering in her Aunt Jane's Here she strayed and there ending by and by just the bedge that separated Gordon's garden from that of Carothers

Mow in that self-same yard a most Lateressing game of ball had been in progress for some time. Phyllis loved both as a spectator and as player, for at home with her brothshe had learned to play the game examplay it well.

But that was a long time ago, she conght with a sigh, when she was Now she was a young woaccording to auntie's version Interpretation, those two words extailed all sorts of dreadful things. was that Phyllis must give no thought whatever to stray young then who happened to be spending summer in the neighborhood, esrectally those various nephews who visiting neighbor Carothers. With the latter person Aunt Jane not on remarkably good terms at present. Exact cause? Various Amagreements, plus occasional atto mpts at settlement, with Aunt Panels Tabby and neighbor Carothers' name, of canine descent, as the camatis personae.

Twooking over the hedge, Phyllis, Prosecsed of an ardent desire to stir something by way of varying the to solvery, was debating whether or west to bid her neighbors, or one of them at least, a cheerful good evening the next time he looked her way.

"It would be nothing more than tackghoorly," she remarked to Tabby she rubbed affectionately around Mayllis's white-shod feet, that were west visible beneath the hem of her Tabby adored Phyllis. And Phyllis? the tolerated Tabby and fed her an execasional tidbit from her plate.

Fast at this point the man who What had decided was the best Massking of her neighbors, and he it was who looked oftenest at that fair mendience of one, took his turn at the Determined to distinguished himhe gave a mighty swing to his Over the hedge came the ball. Mater it, with the skill of an athlete could do the high hurdles in no timean time, came the batter.

"Reg pardon," he said as he Manded; "have you seen my baand here he stopped short, with conrecording writ large upon his counthenance

What he saw was the girl, who but moment before had been an interstated watcher of the ball game, seaton the ground and rubbing a much swollen instep. Beside her sat the cat, evidently also a participant the accident, as she was bestowing mensiderable attention and much cheking on an injured paw.

Tabitha stopped in the performrance long enough, however, to favor with cause of all the trouble with a sepitting, spluttering address that, had the been able to translate it, might possibly have made the man's blood term cold. As it was, his chief consizern for the moment was for the girl, and the cat was unnoticed.

"There's your ball," said Phyllis, esoluting to it. "Should say I did see ist also I felt it," with an unsuccess-Mal attempt at a laugh.

"Oh, hang the ball," said the man, 2000 anxious and worried to be polite. You're hurt, aren't you? And, by Asplier, so is the cat," he added, as two tooked at Tabby for the first time. That is a calamity."

"Sir," said the now enraged Phyl-"do you put that miserable cat tahend of me in importance? Evident-Far you do, and that being the case I some I should feel highly honored the think that you favor me with any mattention at all."

Rising to her feet with difficulty. anot designing to see the hands held to her assistance, she attempted mocking bow. But the attempt endin a moan of pain from Phyllis as the staggered and would have fallen thered not those despised arms caught need held her while the cause of all the disturbance, now genuinely alarmsed, bent over the girl.

You are more seriously hurt than * thought," said the man. "You will have to let me carry you to the house, Miss Karlton."

"Do you really think I'm damaged more than Tabby?" asked Phyllis with a wicked gleam in her eyes as thre looked down at the cat who was samping along just ahead of them. And by the way," she continued, now do you happen to know my mame, Mr., Mr.-er-Carothers, isn't

"John Carothers, at your service," he said, between puffs, for Phyllis was not exactly a featherweight and Thurst Jane's house was at the other and of the garden. "As for your name, knew that before you had been here na day. And please don't say anything rimore about that wretched cat. It has giveready stirred up quite enough

"You mean Pete, your uncle's dog. has caused trouble enough," said Miss Karlton defiantly from Caroth-

"I said, and I meant it, that your caut's cat has caused trouble erough," contradicted Mr. Carothers

"Fut me down, please," said Phyllis Baughtily. "I certainly shall, with pleasure when I get you into the house," gasped the heavily breathing Mr. Carothers as he stumbled up the veranda "Sir, you are rude."

"Mademoiselle, you are heavy! But enough of this unpleasantness," opening the screen door, getting himself and his burden through with difficulty, and letting the door swing to just in time to catch the tip end of pussy's tail as she hobbled painfully A wail of anguish immediately announced a fresh calamity.

"Suffering cats, what have I done now?" asked the starled Mr. Carothers, almost dropping Phyllis.

That young woman suddenly burst into hysterical laughter

Back up a little and I'll open the door and release the poor thing. Your words bore truth sir, and were wrong in only one particular. There is only one suffering cat, you see. It's horrid of me to laugh, I know, but I can't help it. Indeed I can't.

Tabby by this time had been released. Phyllis leaned forward in Carothers' arms and runing her fingers along the wall pressed two buttons, turning on the light in the broad hall and living room.

"Put me on the couch, please," said

"Delighted to oblige you," said Mr. Carothers, depositing the victim of his ball and bat with a sigh of relief. 'I know I'm not a fairy, but you needn't be rude enough to tell me about it every five seconds," said Phyllis petulantly. 'Where's your aunt?" asked Carothers abruptly. "Out visiting a neighbor. Otherwise," with a laugh, I' should not have dared to be down in that end of the garden.' "Oh, I see," said her companion with a grin that seemed to make the footing of these tow still more that of good friends and comrades. "Then where is the maid?"

"Out," was the brief reply.

Phyllis was enjoying herself immensely. Her good-looking neighbor was the cause of all this trouble and could get himself out of his present difficulties without assistance from "Great Scott, what next?" asked John Carothers, as he mopped his perspiring brow. "Where is the telephone? I can call the doctor at least."

"On the table at the far end of this

Mr. Carothers, to his extreme re Hef, found the doctor in and he promised to come to the rescue at once Dr. Billings and Miss Gordon arrived at the garden gate at the same time, and it was an excited and alarmed Aunt Jane who rushed into the house, She was too agitated, when Carouthers was presented to her, to be anything but civil to him, and later when she suddenly realized who he was, it was too late. Tabitha, seeing Miss Gordon, made a painful descent from her refuge and went to her mistress. who, when she saw the predicament her pet was in, left her niece to the tender mercies of the doctor.

"I told you that the cat's injuries were more important than yours, said Carothers with a grin.

Dr. Billings had finished his cyamination of Phyllis's foot by the time Carothers had returned to the living part of the body rest is impossible room to learn that the patient was and the system becoming weakened suffering from nothing more serious than a badly bruised instep which would compel her to remain on her couch for a week or ten days. Phyllis had made a wry face at the verdict. by steadying the irritated nerve

As Carothers bent over Phyllis to say good night she whispered:

"I've set Aunt Jane's mind at rest. I've told her-well, several thingsbut not just exactly what happened. You keep still," as Carothers attempted to speat. "You see, you must of the first box if no benefit results. not tell her anything because your confession will implicate me. I disobeyed orders, you know."

"Just the same, I don't like sailing under false colors," said Carothers, frowning. "It was all my fault and I want Miss Gordon to know it."

"Well, she isn't going to to know it and I forbid you to say anything about it," said Phyllis, sternly.

"As a compensation will you let me come every day to see how you are getting along?" "I'll think you are quite rude and heartless if you don't do that," returned Phyllis.

And as Aunt Jane tragically remarked to a friend, into whose ears she poured the tale of her niece's betrothal to one of the haterd tribe of Carothers, "that was the beginning of the end."

A Handsome Woman

some, but every woman should keep with care the good points nature has given her. No woman need have sallow skin, dull eye, blotchy complexion, who pays proper attention to her health. Where constipation, liver derangements, blood impurities and other irregularities exist, good complexion, bright eyes and sprightly movements cannot exist. Internal derangements reveal themselves sooner or later on the surface. Headache, dark rings around the eyes, sallow skin, a constant tired feeling---mean that the liver and digestive organs are needing help and correction. Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets give this necessary help. They work in nature's own way. They do not merely flush the bowels but tone up the liver and stomach to fulfill their proper functions. So mild and gentle do they act that one hardly realizes that they have taken medicine. Chamberlain's Tablets can be relied upon to relieve biliouness, indigestion, constipation and dizziness. Sold everywhere. Price 25 cents.

ABOUT ADVERTISING-NO. 2

The Dollar That Can't Be Spent

By Herbert Kaufman

Every dollar spent in advertising is not only a seed dollar which grows a profit for the merchant but is actually retained by him even after he has paid it to the publisher.

Advertising creates a good will worth the cost of the publicity.

It actually costs nothing. While it uses funds it does not use them up. It helps the founder of a business to grow rich and at the same time keeps his business from not dying when he does.

It eliminates the personal equation. It perpetuates confidence in the store and makes it possible for a merchant to withdraw from business without having the profits of the business withdrawn from him. It changes a name to an institution—an institution that will survive after the death of its builder.

It is really an insurance policy which costs nothing—pays a premium each year instead of calling for one, and renders it possible to change the entire personnel of a business without disturbing its prosperity.

Advertising renders the business stronger than the man—independent of his presence. It permanentizes systems of merchandising, the track of which is left for others to follow.

A business which is not advertised must rely upon the personality of its proprietor, and personality in business is a decreasing factor. The public does not want to know the man who owns the store—it isn't interested in him, but in his goods. When an unadvertised business is sold it is only worth as much as its stock of goods and fixtures. There is no good will to be paid for -it does not exist-it has not been created. The name over the door means nothing except to the limited stream of people from the immediate neighborhood, any of whom could tell you more about some store ten miles away which has regularly delivered its shop news to their breakfast tables.

It is as shortsighted for a man to build a business which dies with his death or ceases with his inaction as it is unfair for him not to provide for the continuance of its income to his family.

After The Grippe

"I am much pleased, to be able to write and thank you for what Cardui has done for me," writes Mrs. Sarah J. Gilliland, of Siler City, N. C.

"Last February, I had the Grippe, which left me in bad shape. Before that, I had been bothered with female trouble, for ten years, and nothing seemed to cure it.

"At last, I began to take Cardui. I have taken only three bottles, but it has done me more good than all the doctors or than any other medicine I ever took."

The Woman's Tonic

For the after-effects of any serious illness, like the Grip, Cardui is the best tonic you can use. It builds strength, steadies the nerves, improves the appetite, regulates irregularities and helps bring back the natural glow of health.

Cardui is your best friend, if you only knew it.
Think of the thousands of ladies whom Cardui has helped! What could possibly prevent it from helping you? Remember you cannot get the benefit of the Cardui ingredients in any other medicine, for they are not for sale in any drug store except in the Cardui bottle. Try Cardui. Their Calle Vary Decidedly in the Changing Circumstances of Sunshine and Storm.

One of the most interesting features in the study of bird life is to note their varying calls in the changing circumstances of sunshine and storm.

The frequent snowfalls of the recent winter have often been beraided by the mournful "cluck-cluck" of the blackbirds as they flock around the doors, looking for the crumbs that custom has led them to expect. The mavis is mostly mute during a storm, and tells his tale of woe more by his ruffled feathers and drooping wing than by his voice. His note, however, is the first to welcome change to warmer weather.

The stormcock, by which is meant the blue felt or fieldfare, does not frequent the habitation of man, but there is no more certain sign of approach of severe weather than a flock of these birds flying southward. Their note is an ominous "chuck, chuck," and but for that they would often pass unnoticed overhead.

The skylark also passes south uttering a timid, twittering note, which will later give place to a gay burst of song. The starlings flock greedily to wherever food is to be found, be it in field or homestead. The first blink of warm sunshine, however, sees them perched on the eaves, vibrating their wings in a manner no other bird does and imitating with an air of intense satisfaction the call notes of a host of other birds

The sparrows which robbed the farmer in the autumn flock townward in winter, and their cheerless twitter on the housetops bears faint resemblance to their noisy clamor in the cornfield. The robin seeks his dole with an air of quiet confidence and sometimes rewards us with a burst of song quite out of keeping with his surroundings. The blue tits have no voice to say they are hungry, though their actions show it, but their spring note may be heard in the wood lands, when they forsake our doors for the field and hedgerow.

BARBERS OF ANCIENT TIMES

Introduced Into Rome From Bielly, Their Shops Became the Resorts of the Fashionable.

Professional barbers are said to have been introduced into Rome by Menas from Sicily, of which island he was practor in the days of Cicero. Under the empire their shops, in some instances, became fashionable resorts at which every luxury of the toilet was enjoyed, and the gossip and news of Rome and the empire were discussed. The means, luxury and weaknesses of personal adornment therein carried to excess is amply immortalized in the pages of Terence, Plautus, Horace, Juvenal and Martial. Other barber shops were more retired, as we learn from the annals of the Emperor Commodus, who, having wearied at times of the wholesale tragedies of the Coliseum, wherein armies and fleets engaged in murder at his savage behest, and being desirous of a little humorous diversion used, like the Caliph of Bagdad in the Arabian Nights, to disguise himself and sally forth accompanied by two or more of his favorites, and having hired a barber's shop suitable for his purpose would place one of his men at the door to solicit custom. Having secured a customer, the emperor-barber would politely affix the towel and apply the lather, all the time keeping up a running fire of the latest jests and little pleasantries until the customer and himself were almost overcome with laughter. Then the keenedged razor would slip and among regrets and proffers of assistance the noseless victim would be assisted to the rear of the shop, where between threats and bribes he was kept from making a riot until one or two more victims were added to the number and Commodus, tired of his demoniac pleasantry, was ready to return to the palace or the arena.-Charles Winslow Hall in the National Magazine.
